There are happy time, sad times, and then there are memories. Memories are something that nothing can take from you. Memories are precious.

Each person has a soul mate that can come in every shape and form. I had one. One that touched my soul to the depths of the world. No matter what, she was there. ALWAYS...

My sassy, social butterfly Riley left me with nothing but our memories. No more carrots, no more nanners, no more hops across my face, no more travels, no more bunny kisses.

My precious girl just had enough of this world. She did give me something not everyone gets and that is true love. Love from the soul. She gave some many a smile, a different out look on bunnies and of course, laughter. My perfect angel gave something to everyone she met. Spirit, hope, and joy. I took her everywhere and people that didn't know her or even cared for a rabbit fell in love with her. She was just magical.

Her little paws no longer will grace my floor anymore, she no longer begs for treats at the refrigerator, she no longer sleeps with Emery, Lilly, Shelby, her dad and me on the couch, but now she sleeps with the angels.

Neither my heart nor my family will ever be the same again with the missing piece of Riley. Anyone who was ever graced with her presence adored her. I have no words to express the pain of her little life being no more but I do know I was given the gift of being her mama for the time I was granted to be with her.

All I can think is Wilson must have needed her to show him the way to the carrots and nanners. That's all I can imagine at this point.

My life, our family, our world has forever changed because of this little girl. It will be different forever. My sweet angel laying in her bed got her last carrot this morning, her lavender flowers, and her purple blanket for her final ride.

She will be in my heart, broken or not, for all of time. I know I was special because I had her in my life. She is and always will be my world.

Binky free my love, my Riley bug, my little Nicole..Mama loves you to the moon and back. Your paw prints left a permanent scar on my heart.
