

Winston Churchill

March 23, 2022

Last May, on the other side on SC, I went with my 3 girlfriends to rescue these rabbits we heard needed our help. I didn't know that day would change my life. During our walk thru, Mico came found me and told me in the back of a building there was an ENGLISH LOP! I ran to this building and found this beautiful soul laying in the floor, scared and hurt. I don't think I left him after that. I layed down with him in that floor and I told him this was it, he would be free from this. I made a promise that no matter what, he wouldn't hurt, be hungry, or scared ever again.

We didn't even know if these rabbits would make the trip back to Conway but as soon as we put them in crates to transport, this rabbit and his partner collapsed. They were exhausted and I think knew they were finally going to be safe. That night, I stayed with him. I kept reminding him that no matter what, I'd be here with him, care for him and love him til his last breathe. I promised when that day came, I'd be there to hold him and comfort him.

Winston Churchill became a part of everything. He was so full of life. I never will forget his face that morning in the sun. I don't know how long it had been since he had seen the sun, but he would get that chance now daily for the rest of his life.

And what a life he has seen since. How he has brightened the darkest of days. He was my strength through losing Wilson, Riley, and the others. He has shown me to never give up. His beauty has given so many a smile or a laugh.

He has been everywhere with me 24.7 for the past few months due to his declining health and mobility.

Last night, I had to fulfill my promise to my sweet Winston as he crossed that rainbow bridge.. I held him like I said I would and told him to go find my Riley, she would take care of him now. My time with him maybe now over, but my world will be forever changed because of that amazing soul and heart.

Mama love you Winston Churchill - you can finally binky.

May 2015 - March 23, 2022

Tribute Wall

“ 4 files added to the album Winston Churchill

Loyal Companions Pet Cremation & Memorial - July 19, 2022 at 02:15 PM